

Rob Corrigan
Vice President of Product Management and Planning
CoreSource, Inc.

Rob Corrigan is Vice President of Product Management and Planning for CoreSource, Inc. CoreSource is one of the largest, independent third party administrators in the country. Rob leads CoreSource's strategic planning, product development and new business development initiatives.

Rob Corrigan joined CoreSource in 2007 with more than 25 years of experience in the health care industry. He has developed innovative new products, strategic plans and completed mergers and acquisitions for a major health system and a national managed care insurance company. He has been a consultant with ChapterHouse and with Blue Cross Blue Shield Association working with major insurance companies across the country on developing marketing, managed care and turnaround strategies. While at Blue Cross Blue Shield Association, Rob was one of the primary designers of the health plan risk-based capital formula now used by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) to regulate health insurance companies. He is a regular speaker at national conferences and has authored several articles for Business Insurance.

Corrigan earned a bachelor's degree in Industrial Engineering and Business Administration, and a Master's of Business Administration from the University of Illinois at Chicago.
